Course content:

The course will address the major historical and current issues in Canadian federalism and intergovernmental policy, emphasizing the post-World War II period. It will also draw comparisons, where relevant, with other federal systems. The fall term will be devoted to theoretical, constitutional and institutional issues. It will be subdivided into 7 sections. In section 1 (Introduction) we will define the concepts of federalism and federation, and place them within a broader conceptual framework. Section 2 will cover the major approaches and value questions that are common to the study of federal systems. In section 3 we will consider some alternative views of the origin of the federal concept, and compare the pattern of historical development of federalism in Canada with that of other federal systems, particularly the United States. In sections 4-6 we will explore some historical and contemporary issues in the study of Canadian federalism. We will address these issues by analyzing the way federal structures such as the constitution, judicial review, and executive federalism influence and shape them. In the seventh section we will give special attention to the patterns of Quebec-Canada intergovernmental relations, including Quebec's desire for constitutional recognition of its special status, its relations in practice recently with both the current federal government and the other provinces and territories, and the possibility of either future federal constitutional reform or Quebec secession.

In the winter term we will survey intergovernmental policy processes and substantive policy concerns in a number of different economic, social and cultural areas of Canadian politics, and consider some comparative intergovernmental policy concerns. It will be subdivided into 7 sections, encompassing sections 8-14. Section 8 (Theoretical Approaches to the study of intergovernmental relations and public policy) will treat some of the ways that intergovernmental policy issues have been identified and addressed analytically by students of federalism. Sections 9-11 on intergovernmental economic policy will explore problems of national economic development, international trade and economic globalization, and vertical and horizontal disparities and inequalities in fiscal federalism. Sections 12-13 on intergovernmental social policy will cover health policy and post-secondary education. Section 14 will address intergovernmental relations and aboriginal self-government and Section 15 will deal with intergovernmental environmental policy.

Course objectives:

The major objectives of the course are:

1. to give students a broader historical and contemporary understanding of Canadian federalism and of intergovernmental policy issues, particularly in relation to experience in other federal systems, and in terms of the values it promotes.
2. to make students aware of the variety of theoretical and ideological perspectives used to analyze and address these problems.
3. to provide students with a more in-depth understanding of current issues in the contemporary operation of Canadian federalism and intergovernmental policy, a forum to debate alternative proposals for federal system and intergovernmental policy reform, and an opportunity to frame possible scenarios for the breakdown of our federal system.

Course requirements:

There will be two hours of lectures, including in-class discussion, during most scheduled course times; however four one-hour tutorial sessions comprised of smaller groups of students will be scheduled intermittently during the year, as indicated in the course outline below. The tutorials will be led either by the instructor or the teaching assistant. Students are expected to attend and participate actively in all such tutorial sessions, since they will be earning most of their participation grade in them. Additional topic readings for these tutorials may occasionally be assigned to the students.

Students will write an in-class one hour mid-term test on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 14, 2010 in the fall term and on THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 2011 in the winter term. They will also be asked to submit to the instructor each term a short (1-2 page) essay outline that includes the topic and major research question of their planned essay. These essay outlines are due on THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21, 2010 and on THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 2011 respectively. A choice of essay topics will be distributed early in each term, and the completed essay of about ten (10) typewritten double-spaced pages in length will be due on THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 2010 and THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 2011 respectively. All essay assignments should be submitted to the instructor at the beginning of the class on the due date. Students are strongly advised to keep rough draft work and hard copies of their essays and assignments before handing them in to the Department. These should be kept until the marked essays and assignments have been returned. A penalty of 0.5% of the final overall course grade per day will be deducted for late essays. Students will also be expected to write a one-hour in-class test at the end of each term. Course grades will be allocated as follows: 15% for each mid-term and end-of-term test, 15% for each essay, and 10% for tutorial and class participation. (both terms)

Course textbooks and coursepack readings:

There are three texts that have been ordered for the University of Toronto bookstore and also placed on Short Term Loan (reserve) in Robarts Library. They are: Herman Bakvis, Gerald Baier and Douglas Brown, Contested Federalism: Certainty and Ambiguity in the Canadian Federation (Don Mills: Oxford University Press, 2009), Herman Bakvis and Grace Skogstad (eds.), Canadian Federalism: Performance, Effectiveness and Legitimacy, 2nd ed. (Don Mills: Oxford University Press, 2008), and Ronald L. Watts, Comparing Federal Systems, 3rd ed. (Kingston: Institute of Intergovernmental Relations, Queen's University/McGill-Queen's University Press, 2008). The third (Watts) text will be used in the first term only. There will be reading assignments from these texts in most sections of the course outline. In addition to these textbook assignments, there will be other reading assignments in the syllabus which are available either in a coursepack (indicated by an asterisk or *) or obtainable from the reserve (Short Term Loan) section of Robarts Library. The 2010-2011 coursepack can be ordered and purchased at Custom Publishing, Canadian Scholar's Press Inc. (CSPI), 180 Bloor Street West, Suite 801, Toronto (Phone 416-929-2774, ext. 12) or obtained at www.coursepack.ca.

Plagiarism:

Plagiarism is a serious offence, and will be dealt with accordingly. For further clarification and information, please see the University of Toronto's policy on plagiarism at <http://www.utoronto.ca/writing/plagsep.html>. Normally, students will be required to submit their course essays to be included as source documents in the Turnitin.com reference database, where they will be used solely for the purpose of detecting plagiarism. The terms that apply to the University's use of the Turnitin.com service are described on the Turnitin.com web site.

Accessibility Needs:

The University of Toronto is committed to accessibility. If you require accommodations for a disability, or have any accessibility concerns about the course, the classroom or class materials, please contact Accessibility Services as soon as possible at: disability.services@utoronto.ca or <http://studentlife.utoronto.ca/accessibility>.

Blackboard:

All information about additions or changes in course readings and assignments will be posted on the course website, Blackboard, by the instructor or his teaching assistant, and will also be announced in class. Class handouts and other teaching aids will also be made available on the Blackboard website.
