STUDIES IN MODERN POLITICAL THEORY

WINTER SESSION 2019

Professor C. Orwin (clifford.orwin@utoronto.ca)

Our text this semester will be Nietzsche's Beyond Good and Evil: Prelude to a Philosophy of the Future, the most widely read of his mature works and arguably the most perfect. The first of the series of works following Thus Spake Zarathustra, it aims to draw the reader back to that indigestible mass, but as its style could not be more different, so too it boasts a distinct aim. In Ecce Homo Nietzsche declared that with the completion of Zarathustra the yes-saying part of his task had been solved: "the turn had come for the No-saying, No-doing part...the revaluation of all values so far, the great war." He went on to describe BG&E as "in all essentials a critique of modernity, not excluding the modern sciences, the modern arts, and even modern politics – along with pointers to a contrary type that is as little modern as possible– a noble, Yes-saying type." In our reading we will try to do justice to this dual movement of the book. We will draw heavily on Laurence Lampert's commentary Nietzsche's Task, on his controversial pro-Nietzschean polemic Leo Strauss and Nietzsche, and on Strauss's own "A Note on the Plan of Nietzsche's Beyond Good and Evil" – Strauss's only work devoted to a work of Nietzsche's. We will also read Michael Gillespie's recent Nietzsche's Final Teaching, thus availing ourselves of a third outlook on Nietzsche differing from the other two. Students will also be expected to acquaint themselves with at least one other major work of Nietzsche's and with three other works of secondary literature.

A warning: class sessions will be grueling and will run for the entire allotted span. The will be pitched to the attention span and presumed scholarly accomplishments of graduate students and as always our course motto will be that of the Oregon Trail: THE COWARDS NEVER STARTED AND THE WEAK DIED ALONG THE WAY.

Course Assignments and Marking Scheme

POL 485H1S (the undergraduate course). One essay of 1375 words due Friday, February 8, 13, one of 2750 words due Monday, April 1, a take-home exam to be distributed the afternoon of Friday, March 22, due by 2 PM on Monday, March 25. The first essay will be worth 10% of the final mark, the second one will be worth 40%, the take-home exam will be worth 40%, and participation will count 10%.

POL 2027H1S (the graduate course). One essay of 2000 words due Friday, February 15, one of 5500 words due Monday, April 15; a take-home exam to be distributed the afternoon of Friday, March 22, due at 2 PM on Monday, March 25. The first essay will be worth 20% of the final mark, the second one will be worth 40%, and the take-home exam will be worth 40%.

In each of your essays you will be expected to cite at least six secondary sources (i.e., books or articles, at least three of which, however, must be books). You're graduate students, remember? (Or, even more pitiful, undergraduates trying to pass for graduate students.)

In each of your essays you must remain within the prescribed word limit; the surplus words will go unread.

PLEASE SUBMIT YOUR ESSAYS ELECTRONICALLY THROUGH THE QUERCUS WEBSITE, THEREBY SPARING CANADA'S FORESTS.

N.B. In the graduate course as in the undergraduate one, no extensions will be granted on written work except for good cause. In keeping with Nietzsche's theory of punishment, however, according to which every crime has its price and punishment was originally nothing more than an exaction of that price (cf. On the Genealogy of Morals, Second Essay), extensions will be readily available to those willing to purchase them. The price will be 3 points, plus 2 additional points per day beginning with the first, off your mark for that assignment. (If you are one day late you will lose 5 points; two days late, 7; etc.). This proviso does not apply to the take-home exam, which will not be accepted if late.

You are responsible for informing yourself of and abiding by the University's policies on plagiarism and other academic offenses.
