Administrative Details:

Term: Fall 2022
Times: Thursdays, 6-8 PM
Location: BL 313

Course Overview:

This course provides comparative analysis of the politics and socio-economic issues of Southeast Asian states while recognizing both the patterns and diversity of the region. While many countries experienced centuries of colonial rule, others were also indirectly affected. From decolonization to the rise of nationalism and communism in the early twentieth century transformed the region’s political systems in fundamental ways. The Cold War, during which the United States and the Soviet Union competed on a global scale, also divided the region along political lines which shaped the social and political development of the states in the region.

Furthermore, industrialization and rapid economic growth transformed many countries from peasant societies to modern, urban and industrial countries. Yet the vast political and economic changes occurred unevenly both across the region, as well as within the countries themselves resulting in various modes of contention from protest to civil war, some of which are still ongoing to this day. All of these forces of change have greatly influenced the political systems in the region, the ways in which groups and individuals participate in politics, and the degree to which political institutions are representative. The course offers an analysis of the political systems of the region with an emphasis on understanding political change and its relationship to socio-economic transformation. The broad questions to be explored in this course include How can we characterize the various political systems of the region? How can we explain why and how they have changed? How Are they developing political systems that reflect their unique historical and cultural experiences? How has the vast socio-economic transformation of the region influenced politics?

Requirements:

Grading criteria for the course will be in the following areas:

1. Participation and in class discussions (20%): student-led discussion is critical to the success of a seminar course. To those ends, students will be assessed on their attendance, their level of participation, and their degree of preparation for class discussions.

2. Critical response papers based on assigned readings (15% x 2 = 30%): two 1000-word, double-spaced papers that critically engage with the required readings. Note that these papers should not be summaries of the week’s assigned readings; rather, they should develop theoretical, empirical, or methodological critiques of one or more articles and/or highlight new directions for future research on the week’s topic. Students will be assigned sessions during the first class with the expectation that they will review one session in the conceptual portion of the course, and one session in the case study portion of the course. Papers must be uploaded onto Quercus before midnight the day prior to class for each session that is reviewed.

3. Major research paper (50%): an 8,000-word, double-spaced paper that addresses a major question in the study of Southeast Asia. This paper can engage in a single-case study, or comparative analysis of two or more cases. The paper should be written in the form of a first draft of a paper intended for publication, meaning it should include a brief literature review, a theoretical argument, and an empirical test of the theory. Paper topics must be approved in advance. Students are to submit their proposed topics to the instructor by email no later than 11:59PM, Thursday, October 13th. The final paper will be due one week after the final class on 11:59PM, December 8th.

Policies:

Late or missed papers: Late papers will be penalized 5% per calendar day, excepting only extraordinary personal emergencies. If you find yourself in such a situation, please email me as soon as possible to inform me. Substantiating documentation will be required and must be submitted within one week of the missed due date. Note that assignments or tests from other courses scheduled for the same day do not constitute acceptable reasons—please plan accordingly. In the absence of substantiating documentation, late or missed assignments will receive a mark of zero.

Accessibility: The University of Toronto is committed to accessibility. If you require accessibility accommodations of any kind, please contact Accessibility Services at accessibility.services@utoronto.ca as soon as possible.

Academic Honesty: Plagiarism is a major academic offense and will be treated accordingly. Students are required to familiarize themselves with and conform to the University of Toronto’s policies on Academic Honesty, available at http://www.artsci.utoronto.ca/newstudents/transition/academic/plagiarism. In addition, students should consult Margaret Proctor’s guide on “How Not to Plagiarize,” available at http://advice.writing.utoronto.ca/using-sources/how-not-to-plagiarize.

Ouriginal: Normally, students will be required to submit their course essays to the University’s plagiarism detection tool for a review of textual similarity and detection of possible plagiarism. In doing so, students will allow their essays to be included as source documents in the tool’s reference database, where they will be used solely for the purpose of detecting plagiarism. The terms that apply to the University’s use of this tool are described on the Centre for Teaching Support & Innovation web site (https://uoft.me/pdt-faq).

Mental Health: Students are highly encouraged to prioritize their own mental health over any individual assignments. If you find yourself becoming emotionally distressed or overwhelmed any time throughout the course, please do not hesitate to reach out to the instructor for help accessing mental health services. Additionally, a list of mental health resources will be posted for students on Quercus should they choose to access them confidentially.
Required Reading:

Quercus will be used to manage the course and readings. Specific and additional readings will be noted on the semester-specific schedules posted to Quercus.

Week 1, Sept 8th: Course Overview and Introduction

No Readings

Week 2, Sept 15th: Patterns of Politics and Transformation in Southeast Asia

Week 3, Sept 22nd: Colonialism and Nationalism

Week 4, Sept 29th: The Cold War and Communism

Week 5, Oct 6: Democratization and Regime Change

Week 6, Oct 13: Identity, Contention, and Political Violence

Week 7, Oct 20: Indonesia

Week 8, Oct 27: Malaysia

Week 9, Nov 3rd: Philippines

Reading Week Break

Week 10, Nov 17th: Myanmar

Week 11, Nov 24th: Thailand

Week 12, Dec 1st: Conclusion and Wrap-Up

No Readings